

RAIN
This Weather Suggests the Seashore, Mountains, Country.
Have you decided where to go—where to send your family?
Look through The Morning World's Summer Outing Directory.
PRICE ONE CENT.

THE EVENING EDITION
"Circulation Books Open to All."
NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1893.
World.
"Circulation Books Open to All."
NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1893.

HOT WEATHER
Gains in advertising are remarkable. Still, The World yesterday published 15 per cent. more advertisements under the heading of "Houses, Rooms and Apartments" than on the corresponding day last year.
PRICE ONE CENT.

Saturday and Sunday==World's House and Home Days.

LAST EDITION EIGHT PAGES.

STANFORD IS DEAD.

United States Senator and King of Palo Alto.

Found Lifeless in Bed After a Day
of Cheerful Business.

Man Who Made Name and Fortune
and Founded a University.

MENLO PARK, Cal., June 21.—United States Senator Stanford died at 12 o'clock last night. He passed away peacefully at his residence in Palo Alto. Mr. Stanford was in the best of spirits yesterday. He took a drive around his stock farm and seemed as well as ever. He retired shortly after 10 o'clock, and about midnight his valet, going into his bedroom, discovered that he was dead.

U. S. SENATOR LEONARD STANFORD.

It has been evident for some time that Senator Stanford's demise was a question of but a short time. His symptoms were apoplectic, and his weight was increasing alarmingly. There was a stiffness about his limbs that made locomotion an exceedingly difficult task. His body was fast becoming too heavy for his limbs to support. He could take only the slightest exercise. Six months ago the Senator sent for Dr. Curtis, of San Francisco. The doctor prescribed heroic treatment, but the Senator was not ready to undergo drastic methods for the reduction of flesh and the restoration of his waning strength. His apoplectic symptoms increased, and his situation became such as to create serious alarm. About six weeks ago it was found necessary to impose a severely plain diet upon the Senator, and since that time his sole food has consisted of fried hashed meat, with hot water as the only liquid accompaniment. The Senator rigidly adhered to the severe requirements of the physician, and it seemed for a time that the results were most beneficial, and might possibly effect a permanent cure. Mr. Stanford expressed himself as much encouraged, and looked forward hopefully to the time when he could devote himself with renewed energy to public affairs and to the completion of certain educational and other benevolent enterprises that were very near to his heart.

Leland Stanford was born in Albany County, this State, on March 1824. He received an academic education, and entered the law office of Wheaton, Doxey & Hadley, at Albany, in 1846. In 1848 he was admitted to the practice of law in the Supreme Court of the State of New York. He removed to Port Washington, in the northern part of Wisconsin, where he practiced law for four years. In the Spring of 1852 a fire destroyed his law library and other property, and he returned to California. There he became associated in business with his three brothers, who had gone to the Pacific Coast some time before. He was first in business at Michigan Bluffs, and in 1856 removed to Sacramento, engaged in mercantile pursuits on a large scale. He was a delegate to the National Republican Convention at Chicago in 1860, was elected Governor of California and served from December, 1861, to December, 1862. As President of the Central Pacific Railroad Company he superintended the construction over the mountains, building 530 miles of it in 23 days. He was interested in other railroads on the Pacific slope, in agriculture and in manufactures. He was first elected to the United States Senate as a Republican in 1880, and served until 1887. He was elected Governor of California in 1892, and was inaugurated on January 1, 1893. He was a member of the Senate of the State of California, and was elected to the United States Senate in 1880. He was a member of the Senate of the State of California, and was elected to the United States Senate in 1880. He was a member of the Senate of the State of California, and was elected to the United States Senate in 1880.

F. SPIES A SUICIDE.

The Well-Known Commission
Merchant Shoots Himself.

Heat the Only Cause Which Can Be Conceived.

He Was Vice-Consul for Honduras
and a Prominent Citizen.

GEN. JARDINE DYING.
A War Veteran Meeting Death Like a Hero.

Gen. Edward Jardine, one of the most gallant soldiers sent by New York to the civil war, is slowly dying at the Hotel Pomeroy, in this city, from the effects of injuries received in battle. He is now sixty-five years old, and for twenty-four years he has been a member of the Custom-House. He attended to his duties until three months ago, when he was obliged to give up. When the war broke out he organized a company at his own expense and put them in the Hawkeye, and went to the front as captain. He fought at Big Bethel, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Camden, N. C., Roanoke Island, Elizabeth City, Suffolk and in other fierce battles, and was badly wounded many times. When he returned in 1863 a lieutenant-colonel he assisted in putting down the draft riots, and at that time received the severest wound of all in his left leg, which made him a cripple for life. Nine surgical operations having been performed at various times, it is from the effects of this injury that he is now dying. He is a member of Washington Post No. 103 of the Grand Army, and also of Chancery Lodge, No. 1, F. and A. M. of this city, and has requested that his funeral be conducted in the simplest manner, in accordance with the Masonic rites.

BROKER HENRIQUES WEAKER.

Passed a Restless Night, After a Rather Severe Flinging Spell.

Brother W. H. Henriques, the victim of Frank, alias "Bill" Ellison's brutality, passed a restless night and seems to be somewhat weaker to-day owing to the intense heat of yesterday. He had a rather severe sinking spell yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Wyncoop and McBurney called to see him last night at 6.30. They reported his condition as practically unchanged. Dr. Wyncoop said that though the patient is in no very immediate danger his condition is certainly critical, and that he would not be able to say anything very definite regarding the same, for at least six or seven days.

EDITOR GUETERBOCK'S DEATH.

Mrs. Gueterbock and Others Before the Grand Jury.

The death of City Editor Gueterbock, of the Staats Zeitung, was under consideration to-day by the Grand Jury. Mrs. Emma Gueterbock, Dr. Morrow, of 156 Second avenue, Arthur Oehler, of 222 East One Hundred and Nineteenth street, and Anna Raben, a servant in the Gueterbock household, were before the Grand Jury this forenoon. Whether Editor Gueterbock committed suicide, as was at first reported, or was the victim of foul play, will be fully investigated.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN THE SOUTH.

Distinctly Felt in the Carolinas and in Georgia.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 21.—A sharp earthquake shock was felt at 11.05 last night, lasting ten seconds. The shock was accompanied by loud and continued rumblings, and glasses on shelves shook loudly. The weather is quite cool and the atmosphere charged with electricity. The vibration was from south to north. Telegraphic reports say the shock was felt also at Charleston, at Wilmington, N. C., at Augusta and Savannah, Ga.

MORE SMALL-POX CASES.

One New Victim and a Death at North Brother Island.

Joseph Parcell, twenty-seven years old, of 319 East Seventy-first street, was taken to North Brother Island to-day suffering from small-pox. He applied for treatment at the Presbyterian Hospital last night. Mrs. Maggie Marsh, aged thirty years, who was sent from the tenement, 13 Third street, to North Brother Island last night, died there. This is the third death which has occurred among patients removed from the Thirtieth street house.

BRIDGE JUMPER ARRAIGNED.

Haggerty Again Remanded Pending
Appearance of Witnesses.

John J. Haggerty, of 21 Cherry street, who jumped from the Brooklyn Bridge Monday afternoon and escaped unhurt, was again arraigned before Justice Martin in the Tombs Police Court this morning. Haggerty was present and asked for an adjournment of the examination until tomorrow. He explained that he expected to find a man who saw Haggerty jump and who would testify for him. Justice Martin adjourned the hearing until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

DID HE MEAN SUICIDE?

Misadvised Lawyer Dies of an Overdose of Morphine.

ST. LOUIS, June 21.—George W. Royce, one of the most distinguished attorneys and citizens of Clayton, St. Louis County, took an overdose of morphine last night and died. Friends deny that the drug was taken with suicidal intent. Mr. Royce was an invalid for the past two years, and took the drug, it is said, to relieve severe pain. His widow, who is also an invalid, does not yet know of his death. The most delicious soda water in the city is sold at Hicks' "Riverfront" Fountain, 215 and 223 St. Everybody says so! Try it yourself and be convinced.

F. SPIES A SUICIDE.

The Well-Known Commission
Merchant Shoots Himself.

Heat the Only Cause Which Can Be Conceived.

He Was Vice-Consul for Honduras
and a Prominent Citizen.

Francis Spies, fifty-five years old, committed suicide at 7.30 o'clock this morning by shooting himself through the head at his residence, 64 East Fifty-fifth street. Mr. Spies was Vice-Consul for Honduras and was formerly Consul-General of Ecuador. He was the only member of the firm of Marcell & Co., the well-known commission house, which occupied the first story of 38 Broadway. He did a large commission business with Honduras and all the South American countries. There are eleven clerks employed in his office. His credit rating in Bradstreet's is $100,000, and it was said he was worth a great deal more. He was a former President of the Panama Star and Herald corporation, which paper wields a great influence in South American affairs. Mr. Spies was born in Brooklyn, fifty-five years ago. He has a war record, is a member of the Seventh Regiment Veteran Corps, and a member of the Lafayette Post. He has been a member of the firm of Marcell & Co. for twenty years, having with G. C. Dennis, a son-in-law of Admiral Cooper, G. S. Wright, and W. Schwarzwelder, joined John Marcell, who had then been established about nineteen years. Before that time he had been employed by Moses Taylor, the banker, in Sixth street. Five or six years after he became a member of the firm of Marcell & Co. He bought out the other members. Mr. Spies married a daughter of the late Gen. Christian Schwarzwelder, President of the Germania Bank, and a brother of his business partner. They had two daughters and one son, and all lived at their home in East Fifty-fifth street until June 10, when Mr. Spies and her children left for Europe. It was Mr. Spies's intention to join them there later. He was well known as a business man and was very active. He was capable of doing a good deal of work, and utilized the time he spent in his office to the best advantage. Among his associates he was known as "Gen." Spies, but he got the title probably because he was at one time a consul-general. He was a member of the Produce Exchange, the Downtown Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Maritime Exchange, the Democratic Club of the City of New York and the Tammany Hall General Committee. The discovery of Mr. Spies's death was made by his valet, a colored man named Cornelius George. About 7 o'clock this morning he had passed the bath on the second floor for his master, and then retired to the lower part of the house. He had only reached the kitchen when he heard two sharp pistol reports, and on rushing upstairs, found Mr. Spies lying on his back on the bathroom floor. There were two bullet holes on the right side of the head, closed to the eye. The shot about the head, closed to the eye, caused death. The other, through the lobe of the ear, was sufficient. The dying man's right hand lay across his breast, and the weapon with which he shot himself, a 38-caliber revolver, was tightly clutched in his fingers. Mr. Spies had wound a towel around his head, evidently for the purpose of catching the blood from the wounds. The linen had undoubtedly been placed on the head before the shooting. Valet George gave an alarm, and rushed around the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street to the corner grocery store kept by Frank Brun, who Mr. Spies had told the valet to call upon. The valet went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was said to be in business with him, he gave the key to the house. The colored valet and the cook, Celia Elbel, the only servants in the house, would not speak of the affair, and closely kept the front doors of the house guarded. The cousin of the dead man called about 11.15, and went upstairs. A few minutes later, when he came down, he declined to give his name. He stated that as far as he knew there was no rational cause for the death. The cousin was positive that financial matters played no part in the desire to end his life. He said that Spies had plenty of money and that Mrs. Spies was wealthy in her own right. He said that he went to the corner grocery store, and Mr. Brun sent for Dr. Barton, of 57 East Fifty-fifth street, who when the doctor answered the summons Mr. Spies had passed away. It is said that to William Schwarzwelder, brother-in-law of the dead man, who was